Greetings IIA Ak-Sar-Ben Chapter Members!

Fall is (finally!) upon us, and always my favorite time of year with cooler weather, the change of colors, harvest season and Halloween. It’s also that time of year to ensure continuing education hours are met and reported for the year, and to look back on professional accomplishments made over the course of the year.

Thanks to all who turned out in both Omaha and Lincoln for our lunch meeting on September 26. A turnout of 82 members and guests underscores the quality professional content our chapter continues to offer. We were privileged to welcome back Ryan Kastner, Global Head of Audit Analytics at PayPal. Ryan’s presentation addressed Applying Audit Analytics as a Core Audit Capability. Ryan recently spoke to our chapter at our spring seminar on How To Start An Audit Analytics Function, where his presentation was likewise very well received. As the presentation title reflected, analytics have become a core competency for internal auditors across the spectrum – in the private, public and nonprofit sectors, and across audit organizations regardless of industry, specialty or department size. For those unable to attend, or who would like to reference, Ryan’s presentation is archived on our chapter site: Ak-Sar-Ben Presentation Archive. Remarkably, Ryan will be reprising his presentation on Audit Analytics as a Core Capability at the IIA All-Stars Conference in Las Vegas later this month.

On October 9th, an impressive 51 Members attended our full-day, 8-CPE Fall Seminar, this year hosted by the Creighton University Harper Center (within the Heider College of Business). We were pleased to host author, speaker and consultant Ann Butera with The Whole Person Project consultancy (based in New York), to educate our audience on Lean and Agile Techniques for Strategic, Value-Added, and Efficient Auditing. The program generated substantial practical project management takeaways. Seminar registration included a participant workbook with exercises designed to stimulate thought and reflection, including SWOT analysis and incorporation of lean and agile principles in to all phases of an audit; planning, testing and reporting. Thanks to our members for providing feedback and input through the post-event email survey that was distributed.

Ethics in Financial Professions will be the focus of our final meeting of the 2018 calendar (CPE reporting) year, to be held on Wednesday, November 28, where Bryan Van Deun of the FBI’s White Collar Crime Squad will be our guest speaker. This offering is intended to assist certified Members in meeting their IIA ethics reporting obligation taking effect this year, and to fulfill an ever-important need for all practicing audit professionals.

Please take note of a few friendly chapter administrative reminders on page 8.

I look forward to seeing everyone at our next chapter meeting on Wednesday, November 28 at the Scott Conference Center in Omaha, or at the Ameritas Building in Lincoln, and at our after-work 5th Annual Student Networking event on Friday, November 9 at Mutual of Omaha.

Should you have a question, comment, or suggestion about a topic or practice, please don’t hesitate to email a member of your chapter leadership team, using the links on the back page of this letter. Note the link to our Chapter Volunteer (both elected and appointed) Descriptions on page 8. We are always seeking volunteer Members committed to The IIA and our chapter’s mission.

See you soon,

Kevin Hitchcock

New—Chapter Membership Directory!

In an effort to promote and facilitate professional networking, idea sharing and consultation, the Chapter has decided to publish an Ak-Sar-Ben Member directory. This directory will be uploaded to the Members-only page of our chapter website, requiring a login with your IIA ID and password.

As part of your IIA Member profile, you may opt in or out as part of your communication preferences. Prior to publication of the local directory, should you wish your information not to be included, we strongly suggest revising your profile to opt out.

Important Note to All Chapter Members:

Information in this directory is for use solely by IIA members in contacting one another. Use of information is prohibited for commercial use or solicitation of products and services. If you do not wish your name and related information to be included in the initial or future directories, please express your wishes by unchecking the appropriate box within your Member profile on The IIA website, within the next week.

CPE CREDIT NOTICE

Reminder to those who attend our chapter meetings, seminars, and conferences: 1 CPE credit is awarded for each 50 minutes of a presentation or training time attended. We realize that there may be times when an attendee must leave early due to work or personal obligations; however, CPE can only be awarded for the time the person actually attended the event. If you must leave an event early, we ask that you let the registration attendant know and mark it on the sign-in sheet so your CPE can be adjusted appropriately. CPE certificates will be issued through the EMT system for confirmed and paid attendees.
Business adoption of artificial intelligence (AI) and robotic process automation (RPA) brings both opportunity and responsibility for internal audit. Internal audit has the opportunity to be a trusted advisor and collaborate with the other functional and business unit leaders on ways to enhance the control environment as business processes are redesigned and automated using AI and RPA. Within internal audit, new testing approaches will be needed for automated processes. Internal audit professionals also have a responsibility to understand risks introduced by AI and RPA and ensure their firm’s controls are well designed and operating effectively to mitigate those risks. They have a vital role to play in helping the business design and develop responsible AI; that is, establish assurance processes to manage the impact associated with risks like bias and security. And, perhaps the greatest opportunity: testing of controls and other departmental tasks can be automated through RPA, expanding internal audit’s capacity and freeing auditors to focus on more value-added activity.

Learning Objectives:

- Explore where AI and RPA sits on the digital disruption spectrum
- Learn how to manage the risks associated with AI, and how internal audit can assist in the business in providing assurance of AI
- Gain a deeper understanding of what RPA is and how it is different from older automation efforts
- Get tactical advice on where to use RPA in IA
- Understand the risks and benefits of automation to your IA function

Course Duration: 1 hour
CPE Hours Available: 1

Speakers:

- Risk Management/Culture
- Cyber Security/Cloud
- Third Party Management
- Integrated Risk Assurance
- Risk Assessments
- Agile Method and Audit
- Fraud Prevention
- Artificial Intelligence
- AML and Fraud models
- Auditing Best Practices

Interested in learning about Chapter Volunteer Opportunities?

We are currently looking for a Newsletter Coordinator to prepare and publish the monthly electronic Chapter Newsletter for the remainder of the chapter year. Contact Kevin Hitchcock for more information. For more information on other volunteer opportunities, access Volunteer Position descriptions on the About Us page of our Chapter site.

A Few Friendly Reminders...

- Please remember to preregister for Chapter Meetings, Seminars and any events where registration is needed using our online Event Management Tool (EMT) system. The registration invitation is sent to your email address of record, and is also posted on the Ak-Sar-Ben Events page of our website. Having an accurate count enables us to better arrange space and food needs with our host venue.

- We do ask that each attendee pay for Meetings and Seminars, either before the scheduled event (via EMT), or on the day of the event. Cash and check are accepted at the registration table. This enables the Chapter to finalize each event in our system in a timely manner.

Thank you for your cooperation and consideration!

IIA Ak-Sar-Ben Chapter Cancellation Policy
Effective August 2018

Monthly Meetings – The designated point of contact must be notified of cancellation no less than 24 hours prior to the start of the meeting in order to receive a refund. Any cancellation within 24 hours of the meeting or failure to attend the meeting will not result in a refund. The registrant can designate someone to use his or her registration without notification to the committee.

Seminars/Conferences – The appropriate point of contact, designated in formal communications, must be notified of the cancellation at least one week prior to the event in order for the registrant to receive a refund. After that point, no refunds will be granted. The registrant may designate an alternate to use his or her registration with notification to the designated point of contact.

It should be noted that this policy may be overridden with approval from the chapter president and a hospitality committee person for extenuating circumstances. Additionally, an event-specific policy may be determined by the event committee and approved by the board. In those cases, the alternate rules must be communicated with the event registration communication.
Chapter Achievement Program Progress

What is CAP? Chapter Achievement Program (CAP), points are credits earned by the Chapter throughout the year. A minimum credit is required in each of the following three categories to qualify for Bronze status:

Service to Members- 325 credits are calculated from: CPEs for members, social events, and the number of IIA professional certificates presented.

Professionalism (formerly Service to Profession)- 200 credits calculated from: miscellaneous services to the profession, CPEs for nonmembers, and hosting a conference.

Chapter Health (formerly Chapter Administration)- 160 credits calculated from: reporting, newsletters and Leadership Conference participation.

Additional credits beyond these can come from any category in order to qualify for a higher level.

We need you, our IIA Ak-Sar-Ben members, to notify our Chapter President Elect, Ron Povondra of the following:

1. Any articles that you have submitted on audit-related topics to the IIA or any other professional organization (please include the date of submission, title, and the publication to which it was submitted).
2. Any articles that were published in The IA Magazine (please include the date of publication).
3. Any presentations for organizations that are audit-related (please include the date, presentation length rounded up to the next whole hour, location, number of attendees, and number of IIA member attendees).
4. Participation in any Junior Achievement Program (please include the date, hours volunteered, and location).
5. Participation on an IIA International or North American Committee.

6. Hosting an Internal Audit event at work (please include the date, presentation length rounded up to the next whole hour, location, and speaker).
7. Submissions to the Audit Channel TV.
8. Participation on an IIA-sponsored Quality Review Team.
9. The completion of a Quality Assessment by your organization.

Knowledge of these events could significantly increase our CAP points and help us maintain Ruby Status!

Status of our travels on the Road to Gold

We achieved PLATINUM status for the 2017-2018 chapter year, qualifying us for RUBY status!! Thanks for your continued participation in chapter events.
Internal Audit by Any Other Name

Mike Jacka, CIA, CPA, CPCU, CLU, worked in internal audit for nearly 30 years at Farmers Insurance Group. He is currently co-founder and chief creative pilot for Flying Pig audit, Consulting, and Training Services (FPACTS). In From the Mind of Jacka, Mike offers his wit and wisdom on the internal audit profession.

Below is an excerpt from this blog. To read the entire of the blog please go to this link.

Is “Internal Audit” the right name for what we do?
Actually, before I get started on this one, let me make a confession. I’m not sure where I really stand on this. Part of the reason I am putting this particular blog post together is to help me think it through. So, don’t hold me to anything here. Unless you agree with me. Then feel free give me credit. Unless you really disagree. Then I never really meant it. Unless...well, you see my dilemma.

Why do we continue to call ourselves “Internal Audit”?

Here’s the problem. Internal audit means something important to us. We know the history of the profession, the great strides that have been made, and the evolving nature of our work that is all a part of the title “internal audit.”. As a profession – as “internal auditors” – we have embraced the need to provide value, to be a partner with the business, and do all we can to help organizations achieve their objectives.

The history and related branding that comes with the name “internal audit” is not trivial and should not be shredded and disposed of like ten-year-old workpapers.

However, no matter how much we try to change perceptions, “internal audit” will continue to mean something else to a significant portion of our customers. The reason it fails with so many is that it emphasizes two important points that, in today’s world, our clients don’t understand, don’t think is all that important, and/or don’t want to hear.

Start with the word “internal.” We feel it is an important part of our name because it immediately shows that our department is internal to the organization. We proudly point out, just by the use of the word, that we are partners with the business. But that is a concept that few of our customers understand. They don’t understand the nuance of our department being internal, and they do not understand the importance of that relationship. (Part of this is all a marketing thing – helping customers understand who we are. I’ve talked about that before, and will probably talk about it in the future. But now is not the time.)

And then there is that second word – audit. Face it, we even try to shy away from it. That’s part of the reason we no longer refer to clients and customers as “auditees”. We also speak less and less about doing audit work, instead talking about assurance, advisory, and consulting. Nary an “audit” to be seen. But, as much as we try to skirt around the word, it is right there in our name and even in our job titles. Auditor, junior auditor, auditor-in-charge, audit manager, audit director, Chief Audit Executive – no one, not even the audit department, seems to be able to get over that hurdle. So, what is the solution?
Writing an Impactful Audit Report:
6 Tips for Being More Persuasive

Richard F. Chambers, CIA, QIAL, CGAP, CCSA, CRMA, is president and CEO of The IIA. In Chambers on the Profession, he shares his personal reflections and insights based on his 40 years of experience in the internal audit profession.

Below is an excerpt from his latest blog entry. To read the entirety of the blog, use this link.

If you ask internal auditors why they write audit reports, some might answer that it's to communicate an engagement's objectives, scope, and results. Others might offer that it's to describe what the auditors found and to make recommendations for improvement. But the ultimate objective of internal audit reporting is not to describe what we found or to make recommendations for improvement. It is to persuade readers to take action.

Impact is imperative, but not all internal auditors realize the difference that writing style can make to ensure corrective action is complete and timely. The content of a report informs readers, but I would argue that writing style is what motivates. For example, when the U.S. Army tested two versions of a business message asking readers to perform a specific task, those who received a well-written, "high impact" letter were twice as likely to comply with the memo on the day they received it.

During my career as an internal auditor, I wrote or edited hundreds of internal audit reports — some that were good, and some that could have used another round of edits. Following are some recommendations that can help ensure your audit reports are effective — that they will not only change minds but that they will create a call to action that gets results.

1. Keep It Short

If you've taken a look at the Justice Department inspector general's (IG's) report on how federal officials handled the investigation of Hillary Clinton's use of a private email server while secretary of state, you'll see it is strikingly different from the average internal audit report. It contains more than a quarter-million words, and the recommendations don't start until about page 500.

I am not opining on the report's findings or the politics still swirling around it. As a former IG, I can appreciate the need for detail. The scope of the review was daunting, the issues were complex, and every aspect of the engagement was surrounded by controversy. But it's always important to keep the readers in mind, and the style that works for a major IG investigation probably would be inappropriate for your internal audit department. Trying (and failing) to read the IG report in a single evening reminded me of the words of the great Winston Churchill, who said, "This report by its very length, defends itself against the risk of being read."

The lessons for internal auditors: (1) Internal audit reports are most persuasive when they are tailored to our stakeholders' needs; and (2) if we overwhelm our readers with too much information, our reports will have less impact. If a word, idea, or sentence does not contribute directly to the point, consider eliminating it.
