Internal Audit of the Future

In an era when continuous innovation is increasingly seen as essential, embracing the challenges and opportunities new technologies offer is helping redefine the future of internal audit.

By integrating new skills and tools to better identify risks beyond today’s scope, the future internal audit function is transforming itself, taking a more strategic and leading role in its organization’s disruptive journey. Please refer to the link below for more information on the use of analytics and robotics in auditing.

Emerging Leader Spotlight

Joy Penny joined the Army in 1998 and completed her Bachelor’s in Business Administration with a major in Finance in 2008. Upon graduation she was commissioned as a Finance Officer and worked in the budgeting and resource management realm since. She was introduced to Internal Control issues early on and quickly realized how detrimental the failure to adhere to them could be for an organization. She is looking forward to a civilian career in auditing once she retires from the Army.

Message from the President

Thank you to all that joined us at our last chapter meeting on Wednesday, March 6, 2019 where Tim Berichon of Cooper Tire presented on how to build an agile internal audit function. His perspectives on building a diverse team and running the function as a consulting business were very well received. Thank you to Tim for all you do for the chapter. Please be on the lookout for more information on our Cybersecurity and Risk Management Summit and May chapter meeting.

We are in the home stretch of this chapter year and will begin the annual nominations process soon. Your IIA Northwest Ohio Board of Governors continues to work very hard to ensure the chapter will thrive for years to come. To do this, we need your help! As we continue to grow as a chapter, we need volunteers to support our efforts. By being part of either the Board of Governors or a Chapter Committee you will be an important part of our future success. More information to come on how you can volunteer.

I look forward to seeing you at our upcoming events.

Sincerely,
Matt Hoverman
IIA Northwest Ohio Chapter President
